514 water about 5/4 meters deep with their knees slightly bent and there untie the long penis string and tie it on again.

342 [252] The houses are merely living and sleeping houses; cooking is done outside.

[602] The chiefs in part have better built, larger houses; thus, Plate 41 appears here/ /201/ the one belonging to Chief João III was three to four meters high, five to six meters wide, and equally long (Pl. 39).

[344] [203] [622] There are no meeting houses; in order to bring about a decision or announce regulations, the chief goes to the individual houses.

Other special houses are:

343 844 1. Birth houses. These are erected for the woman when birth is imminent; their construction is said to be identical with that of the other houses.

346 2. The mask house in which the dance masks are kept. It always stands apart from the village and in its method of construction is a dry-season house with a round structure on the narrow side turned toward the village. The arches are usually slightly curved and strengthened on top by a ridge beam (Pl. 12, Ill. 3). The mask houses serve as bachelor houses; the young people are said to sleep here. I saw only four mask huts, but cannot confirm 513 these statements from my observations. In any case, the young people do not sleep in the houses, but rather, if there is no mask house, [609] by a fire which is away from the village. Strangers are given shelter by the chief; they sleep in his house, even though they are unmarried (see the reception which I, with my men, found among the Śavajé /pp. 129 ff. in the first part of the work, which is omitted in the translation).

342 423 562 768 The house belongs to the woman. The man builds it before the marriage, with the assistance of the young people, who are paid for it by the woman with chains of beads. The construction takes one or two days. After death the house is said to be burned.

821 According to the accounts of the Indians, the houses are protected from bolts of lightning by a fish spine stuck on the roof on a pole about half a meter long. Probably only magic is involved here.
